

In regards to cell phone use on aircraft, I think it should not be allowed. After being a professional flight attendant for 35 years, I see cell phone use to be a huge problem. 1) No hard evidence that cell phones don't interfere with navigational equipment. 2) A serious security risk caused by terrorists using cell phones to better coordinate their activities. 3) NPRM would ask Flight Attendants to police phone use on airplanes when we already are required to do lots of security observations with NO training and too many other duties. 4) Confined space, lack of privacy, tired people and alcohol consumption already creat a very tense atmonphere on airplanes. We do not need yet another distracting variable thrown into the mix. 5) Cell phones are restricted in many public places where there are far fewer risks at stake, airplanes have to be on the restricted list too.
